

Red Collar Project

Today there are an estimated 200,000 homeless dogs roaming the streets and beaches of Puerto Rico, a United States territory. Island Dog is making historical changes in decreasing the animal overpopulation with the Red Collar Project.

Established in 2008 to help identify dogs being cared for by Island Dog on the East Coast of Puerto Rico, the red collar is a symbol of protection and care. Each dog is fed daily, given medications, vaccinations and spayed or neutered.

Currently, there are 150 dogs being cared for and wearing the red collar

Who We Are...

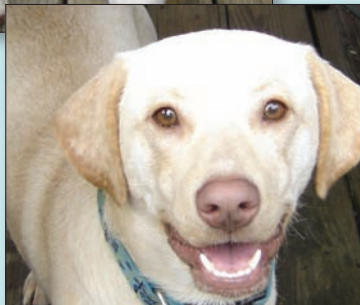

Island Dog, Inc. was established in 2007 to create animal friendly communities in the U.S. Caribbean Islands. Island Dog founder, Katie E. Block, recognized the epidemic of pet overpopulation and animal cruelty plaguing Puerto Rico, a U.S. Territory, and turned her passion to help animals into one of the largest animal welfare organizations in the Caribbean. With the help of many volunteers and supporters, over 1,200 dogs have been transported to the U.S. mainland. Roughly 400 dogs per year are placed into loving homes. And, to date, over 2,000 cats and dogs have been spayed or neutered in an effort to curb the overpopulation of unwanted animals.

Sky, rescued from certain death.

Sky, after getting treatment.

Sky, today. Happy, healthy and in a loving home.

What We Do:

-  We provide rescue for adoptable animals and rehabilitation services for abused and abandoned cats and dogs.
-  We offer free or low-cost spay and neuter services, along with vaccines, for dogs and cats.
-  We feed and medicate hundreds of dogs daily living in our Red Collar Open Air Shelters.
-  We help other animal welfare organizations in the U.S. Caribbean Islands lower their operating costs by donating food and medical supplies.
-  We provide humane education, as well as proper pet care literature, to local children and adults living on the islands.
-  We promote responsible pet ownership.
-  We advocate shelter adoptions and work tirelessly to eliminate puppy mills and “backyard” breeding.

How Can I Help?

Become a “Doggie Flyer”. If you are traveling from San Juan, P.R. to the continental U.S., you can help by escorting a dog there. Island Dog pays ALL costs and a representative will meet you at the San Juan airport to take care of all the paperwork. Another Island Dog representative will meet you at your final destination to collect the dog(s).

Donate your Major Airline mileage. By donating your extra miles, you can help us rescue more dogs and fly them to loving, “forever” homes. See our website for more details on how.

Collect unused and expired medications to help the 300+ dogs and cats we feed and medicate every day. We are always in critical need.

Hold a fundraiser in your area to help collect much needed funds and supplies. It’s through these efforts we’re able to continue our mission to save animal lives.

Create awareness in your community. Print out and post our flyer (or create your own) where more people will see it and learn about us.

Sponsor a Red Collar Dog. It’s easy! To find out how, visit our website.
